Dear Ms. Slack,

I am writing to express my excitement for the opportunity to apply for the reporting internship at Streetcar Suburbs. I have always been captivated by the power of storytelling to connect communities, and my role with the Alexandria Times has reinforced this idea.

Covering arts and culture in Alexandria has allowed me to delve into the heart of a vibrant city and share stories that give it its character – from public art on the streets to art galleries. Each piece I write shows the unique and lively city that is full of history. This has deepened my appreciation for journalism's role in building community identity. Through this experience, I've developed an eye for small details and a need to find unique angles for stories. Whether attending city events or interviewing local artists, I strive to capture the essence of Alexandria's art scene with depth. My skills in feature writing have sharpened my ability to pay attention to detail – a quality that is essential to journalism and communications. My dedication to delivering these feature stories has grown since I have seen the impact it has on the community in Alexandria.

My proactive approach to stories leads me to deliver well-researched and personable articles. The high-stress environment of meeting deadlines and figuring out the best possible story ideas keeps me focused and determined – qualities I am thrilled to bring to your team.

I am incredibly passionate about giving a voice to the voiceless and inspiring people through writing. I would love the opportunity to bring this passion to your team. I believe these enthusiastic qualities would make a great fit.

Thank you for considering my application for the position at Streetcar Suburbs. This summer, I will be most available to work from College Park. I'd love the opportunity to speak about how I can learn and contribute to this position, and I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Sandra Smith
